THE FOCUS RESET

A practical guide for a clearer workday

CLEARFOCUS STUDIO

THE FOCUS RESET

Start with what matters

A clear day begins with a small number of meaningful outcomes.

1

1. Empty your head

List every open task, request, worry and reminder. Capture first; organise second.

2

2. Choose one meaningful outcome

Ask: if only one thing moved forward today, which result would matter most?

3

3. Name the next visible action

Turn the outcome into an action you can start in under five minutes.

4

4. Define done

Write a simple finish line so you know when to stop polishing.

THE FOCUS RESET

Use the Focus Filter

Sort work by impact and urgency before your inbox chooses for you.

1. Do now

   High impact and genuinely time-sensitive. Protect a specific block for it.

2. Schedule

   High impact, not urgent. Put it on the calendar before it becomes urgent.

3. Delegate

   Necessary work that another person can complete with clear context.

4. Remove

   Low-value work that does not support a current priority.

THE FOCUS RESET

Reduce the pull of distractions

You do not need more willpower; you need fewer invitations to switch.

1. Silence the obvious

   Pause non-essential notifications and close tabs unrelated to the current task.

2. Create a capture lane

   Keep one small note nearby for thoughts that appear while you focus.

3. Set response windows

   Choose two or three times to check messages instead of reacting all day.

4. Make starting easy

   Prepare the file, reference and first action before the focus block begins.

THE FOCUS RESET

Work in protected blocks

A repeatable focus block is short enough to start and long enough to matter.

1. Plan 45-75 minutes

   Choose a duration that fits your energy and the task's complexity.

2. State the target

   Write the single result you want from the block.

3. Use a gentle timer

   Let time create a boundary, not pressure. Stop briefly when it ends.

4. Record the next step

   Before leaving, write exactly where to resume.

THE FOCUS RESET

Reset when attention slips

Losing focus is information, not failure.

1. Notice

   Name what pulled you away: a thought, message, unclear task or low energy.

2. Park

   Write the distraction in your capture lane so your brain can release it.

3. Shrink

   Reduce the next action until it feels unambiguous and light enough to begin.

4. Restart

   Return for ten minutes. Momentum often follows movement.

THE FOCUS RESET

Build a calmer routine

A useful routine supports real life instead of demanding perfect days.

1. Morning

   Choose the day's priority before opening reactive channels.

2. Midday

   Check progress, reset your workspace and adjust the plan.

3. Shutdown

   Capture loose ends, choose tomorrow's first action and close the day.

4. Weekly

   Review what moved, what distracted you and what to change next week.

THE FOCUS RESET

Your 10-minute reset

The one outcome that matters today is...

The smallest next action is...

I will protect this time block...

The distraction I can remove now is...

When I finish, I will record...
